

COGNITION & PERCEPTION

a closer look

Your child's cognitive and perceptual development refers to their process of learning and remembering, including problem solving and decision making.

Past experiences with the world around them will form the basis for how your children experience new things. They will understand and adjust to new things based on what they have learned from past experiences.

Here's what that information processing looks like.

